11th Foresight Conference on Molecular Nanotechnology

OCTOBER 9 – 12, 2003
San Francisco Bay Area

CORPORATE SPONSORSHIP

Background

The 11th Foresight Conference on Molecular Nanotechnology is an important event for all researchers interested in current breakthrough works in nanotechnology. The Conference provides a stimulating multi-disciplinary environment that attracts researchers from academic, government, and industrial laboratories worldwide. Papers are accepted from every key nanotechnology discipline including electronic, chemical, biological, medical, and computing topics.

Unlike special-topic meetings, the Foresight Conference series covers the entire field of molecular nanotechnology, enabling researchers to present their work in a broader context, thereby encouraging new collaborations and potentially attracting attention from new sources of funding.

History

Foresight Institute's conferences are the original venue for researchers working in molecular nanotechnology. Foresight Institute was formed in 1986 and the 1st Foresight Conference was held in 1989, predating the U.S. National Nanotechnology Initiative by over ten years.
